A South African pastor who made the news early this year when he instructed his church members eat grass in order draw them closer to God, is back again.

This time, Lesego Daniel of the Rabboni Centre Ministries was pictured, walking all over some members of his church during a 'deliverance session' recently, while the congregation were looking on.

In case you are wondering, it seems like pastor Daniel not disturbed by the backlash he got on social media for the bizarre incident the last time, which is why he still has loyal members he can trample over.

So people, what will you tag pastor Daniel's latest stunt as?
